From the quill pen of Old Ted

8 am 'ish on a lovely island morning. Sea calm and smooth as silk. Mist shrouding all and turning everyday objects into things of magic.

Away the six of us go – wait – six? Or is it five? There is Isaac in his usual number one seat, no he isn't, suddenly Isaac becomes a whisp of mist that spontaneously transmogrifies into – Peter! Yay! (Not that there's anything much wrong with Isaac, just that at this point in time he seems not to exist.

So, off we go, the five of us, Peter, Wendy, Maz, Jen and, as usual, Old Ted (cough, cough, wheeze; "Whose that buggger in the black robe with a scythe following us on the paddle board?" steering). When, suddenly – a family pod of lovely big dolphins appear feeding and playing around us. Mum, dad and the kid, perhaps two mums dads and kids, hard to tell but beautiful and close by us. Maz burns her finger on the camera/phone button.

Onwards again to the mangroves surrounding Garden Island. Is there anything closer the land of Faerie than Mangroves in the Mist? I doubt it. Still and silent. We are blessed by lack of motorised water traffic and the mist dampens the little sound that there is. Mullet jumping, mullet love to jump and I know it's just for fun having watched it in many places, often to a regular timetable.

As we turned through the channel a rainbow appeared bestowing an additional blessing upon us.

Pulled in to Garden Island to let Jen place her feet thereon as she hadn't been previously. Then away on the homeward stretch accompanied by a Sea Eagle soaring above us and with the first of the day's sunshine beginning to disperse the mist.

Back to base tranquil and uplifted. What have we done in a previous incarnation to deserve this?

Pulling in to home base the mystery of Isaac was resolved. There he was sleeping calm and relaxed on one of our waterfront seats having, he explained, temporarily forgotten which planet his corporeal presence was occupying.

All so simple when it is explained.

Lots and lots of cheers,

Ted.

From the Sailing Master

There are some dedicated safety boat operators here in the club and they are doing a great job of covering your back when need be.

As you may have noticed the experienced skippers have been joined by new crew members and now, they are doing the skipper role as well.

There is safety training and revision for all who participate in this support role and we want a meeting with all crew and skippers, and anyone who would like to have a go. We will also make a roster to suit everyone's availability and experience.

You are all welcome to attend the meeting Sunday 29th of May at 11am.
